File Viewing Share Sign up

The Breast Owners Guide To Health

File Viewing Share Sign up

The Breast Owners Guide To Health

Breast Health is health. If you want healthy breasts, you need to have a healthy body. Unlike what we have been told, health is not the absence of disease. Health is optimal function. Here are the top ten habits you should adopt immediately in order to gain optimal function.

1. Adopt a whole-food, plant-based, low-glycemic diet.
2. Filter your water.
3. Start a fasting routine. Humans are not grazers!
4. Be active. Move joyously and frequently. Lift heavy things. Get flexible.
5. Build your stress management skills.
6. Avoid toxins-especially plastics, antibiotics, sanitizers, nonstick, and fragrance.
7. Prioritize sleep-it's where the healing happens!
8. Practice forgiveness.
9. Love deeply.
10. Live gratefully, joyously, and purposefully

If you are already doing all of this, and don't have the health you expect and deserve, then it's time to turn to functional medicine. Places like Real Health MD help people to discover what is interfering with your health so that you can give the body what it needs to thrive. Being tired, having pain, feeling sad or anxious, these are normalized but NOT normal. Neither is being overweight, over tired, lacking energy or passion. Life should be worth living!

Ready for Real Health? click here

Follow Dr. Jenn

File Viewing Share Sign up

The Twelve Most Important Things You Need to Know After A Breast Cancer Diagnosis:

1. Take a breath. There is no rush. You have plenty of time to make the right decisions for you. This is not an emergency (exceptions are Inflammatory Breast Cancer, or metastatic breast cancer that has caused a bone fracture, brain changes, or you are in unbearable pain).

2. Decide that you want to live, not only survive, but thrive.

3. Commit to doing great things to improve your health.

4. Start your three-week juice fast while you are collecting your information. Recipe attached.

5. Get opinions from several providers in each area. Breast surgeons, medical oncologists, radiation oncologists, reconstructive surgeons, integrative oncologists, functional medicine physicians, naturopaths, holistic dentist, etc. You have several months to do this. Don't rush. Do it right!

6. Build your team with the experienced providers you like most that hear you, understand you, respect your opinion, and share your vision.

7. Do your reading and own investigation BEFORE you start any therapy. Do not agree to any treatment unless it feels right for you.

File Viewing Share Sign up

8. Get baseline labs looking at your metabolic health, immune system, inflammation, liver and kidney function, thyroid function, tumor markers, vitamin and mineral levels, hormone levels, and lipid levels. Functional medicine doctors know how to interpret these. Conventional medical doctors generally do not. See attached suggested initial lab sheet and optimal values.

9. Get a CGM (continuous glucose monitor) and start to follow your blood glucose. A guide to using your CGM is attached.

10. Prioritize sleep, daily joyful movement, and self care.

11. Put any unsupportive or toxic relationships on hold for now.There is currently no room for toxicity in your world.

12. Tell yourself every day that you are capable of healing, believe it. Know it.

If you or someone you know is dealing with a breast cancer diagnosis, be sure to oick up my latest book, The Smart Woman's Guide to Breast Cancer, available on Amazon.